Advocate: Kangaroo Care Awareness

Kangaroo Care is used in NICUs worldwide, but yet many NICUs have yet to adopt this simple practice as a routine way to help preemies. Help us celebrate the 4th International Kangaroo Care Awareness Day on May 15, 2015. Learn more with this downloadable newsletter from our friends at Nurtured by Design (home of the Zaky): <http://conta.cc/1cw9Fcj>

To Do List

CONGRATS: Karen Wahlin, MFT gets the Bentley's Preemie Blessing and Jennifer Hunter receives a copy of the little man DVD.

LIKED US YET?: PreemieWorld is doing another PreemieWorld Facebook page contest. See page 2 of this newsletter for details!

Term: Kangaroo Care

Kangaroo Care (also known as Kangaroo Mother Care):

This is a wonderful way to connect with your baby and give him or her the amazing comfort and stability of health. This procedure involves placing your diaper-only baby (plus leads, etc.) on your chest. Quickly you notice that the monitor shows your baby's stats improving and that your baby is much more peaceful and can fall into a very deep slumber. This is something that both moms and dads can do (though dads need to be prepared for a little chest hair pulling).

One thing that's difficult sometimes in this high-tech world in which we live is to begin to rely more on the monitors and machines than the mother. This is where the natural course of mothering turns out, indeed, to be the best medicine.

Editor's Note: May 15th is the 4th Annual International Kangaroo Care Awareness Day: see page 1 for details!

Complex Child Magazine

The Details:

Name:

Complex Child Magazine

Year Established: 2008

Focus: Children with complex medical issues and disabilities

Website:

Having had a child with complex medical needs herself, editor Susan Agrawal understands the unique needs of parents in similar circumstances. When she and other experienced parents were busy answering the same questions and giving practical tips again and again, Complex Child Magazine was created to give a home to their enduring wisdom. For parents of preemies as well as professionals, this body of information is incredibly useful in that it goes across medical specialties and also delves into practical matters such as insurance, taxes, advocacy and more. This magazine is at the top of our list of resources for NICU discharge paperwork for parents.

After the NICU: Sibling Rivalry at Home

When your preemie is home, older siblings are likely to have a mixture of excitement and even frustration. How to keep things cool:

- Give siblings a special job to help out with the baby that is appropriate for their age and skill level.
- Praise them on all positive interactions with the baby.
- When the baby is napping or sleeping, take a bit of time to snuggle with siblings and to even let them talk about their concerns if they are at an age where they can express them.
- When possible, take siblings out one at a time on their own for a special trip to the grocery store, the pharmacy, etc. so you two can talk. Maybe even grab a special snack just for you two.

Tip: Premie Parents are Part of the Team (Part II)

They say hindsight is 20/20 and that is so true. Deb Discenza, Publisher at PremieWorld, in this second installment (you can find the first installment here), gives insight into what she believes Premie Parents in the NICU right now should know for sure:

Know that as a parent YOU ARE part of the NICU team. As I took in the sight of my 30-weeker preemie girl hooked up a lot of medical equipment and clearly in distress, I had no clue how to soothe her. My first inclination was to try and hold her but the barriers of the incubator and the equipment left me impotent to do anything. I assumed the staff members were the ones in charge and I as the parent was simply a bystander. A nurse showed me how to a temperature check and later a diaper change, but honestly it did little to help and I simply continued pumping breast milk.

It was when I first saw the power of my first session of Kangaroo Care that I realized my importance to this odd NICU equation. I was part of the team. I made a difference.

You are part of the NICU equation. You matter. You count. You have say and you have the ability to speak up.
