Organization:

European Foundation for Care of Newborn Infants (EFCNI)

Years in the Field:

16

Focus:

Expertise in advocacy for preterm infants and their families as well as raising awareness for the needs of the tiniest babies in our society.

Professional Tip:

All relevant stakeholders in the area surrounding "prematurity" should work together, as that is much more efficient, as in the end it is all about improving our children's health.

Support: Little Miracles

With the NICU stay of her son, Harry, Cirsty de Gruchy-Wilson wanted to make sure all families were supported with practical gifts and emotional support.

Year Established: April 2014

Outreach: National (to the only SCBU on island of Jersey, Channel Islands in the United Kingdom).

Web: www.littlemiraclesjersey.co.uk

Programs: Supplies a "Hug in a Box" for families that has practical items for the SCBU stays and provides emotional support upon entry to the SCBU. Connect on Facebook and Twitter to keep updated.

Org: Milky Mums

After working through breast-feeding in the NICU herself, Carmen Gould and a group of volunteers are on a mission to make things easier for other Mums.

Website:

www.milkymums.org.au

Blog:

<https://milkymums.wordpress.com>

Year Established: 2014

Outreach: Australia (National)

Focus: Mothers with babies in the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit (NICU)

Background: "Milky Mums was established by me after I had my son at 26 weeks," says founder Carmen Gould. "He came home after 138 days in the NICU but during that time I realised that more resources and emotional support were needed for mothers breastfeeding and expressing for babies in the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit."

Programs:

- Donation of hand-free pumping bras to NICUs around Australia
- Sharing of stories from mothers who have breastfed or expressed for babies in the neonatal intensive care unit via our blog
- Loan pool of breast pumps direct to mothers (in development, contact for info)

Complex Child Magazine

The Details:

Name:

Complex Child Magazine

Year Established: 2008

Focus: Children with complex medical issues and disabilities

Website:

www.complexchild.com

Facebook:

www.facebook.com/ComplexChild

Having had a child with complex medical needs herself, editor Susan Agrawal understands the unique needs of parents in similar circumstances. When she and other experienced parents were busy answering the same questions and giving practical tips again and again, Complex Child Magazine was created to give a home to their enduring wisdom. For parents of preemies as well as professionals, this body of information is incredibly useful in that it goes across medical specialties and also delves into practical matters such as insurance, taxes, advocacy and more. This magazine is at the top of our list of resources for NICU discharge paperwork for parents.

After the NICU: Sibling Rivalry at Home

When your preemie is home, older siblings are likely to have a mixture of excitement and even frustration. How to keep things cool:

- Give siblings a special job to help out with the baby that is appropriate for their age and skill level.
- Praise them on all positive interactions with the baby.
- When the baby is napping or sleeping, take a bit of time to snuggle with siblings and to even let them talk about their concerns if they are at an age where they can express them.
- When possible, take siblings out one at a time on their own for a special trip to the grocery store, the pharmacy, etc. so you two can talk. Maybe even grab a special snack just for you two.

Tip: Premie Parents are Part of the Team (Part II)

They say hindsight is 20/20 and that is so true. Deb Discenza, Publisher at PremieWorld, in this second installment (you can find the first installment here), gives insight into what she believes Premie Parents in the NICU right now should know for sure:

Know that as a parent YOU ARE part of the NICU team. As I took in the sight of my 30-weeker preemie girl hooked up a lot of medical equipment and clearly in distress, I had no clue how to soothe her. My first inclination was to try and hold her but the barriers of the incubator and the equipment left me impotent to do anything. I assumed the staff members were the ones in charge and I as the parent was simply a bystander. A nurse showed me how to a temperature check and later a diaper change, but honestly it did little to help and I simply continued pumping breast milk.

It was when I first saw the power of my first session of Kangaroo Care that I realized my importance to this odd NICU equation. I was part of the team. I made a difference.

You are part of the NICU equation. You matter. You count. You have say and you have the ability to speak up.
