Once, in a Lullaby is a Preemie Classic

The research is clear on music in the NICU: it is brain food. It provides a soothing backdrop for preemies but it also stimulates them in terms of breathing, feeding and more, which quickly translates to earlier discharge. Cheryl Campbell, a classically trained soprano, music teacher and preemie mother crowd-funded a CD that could be donated to families in the Mount Sinai NICU. With 16 soothing classical pieces mixed with pieces of a lullaby quality (like "Over the Rainbow"), Campbell has done a superb job. Grandparents, families, and friends will find this a perfect gift for preemies in the NICU.

After the NICU: Finding A Good Therapist

Whether its Early Intervention or private therapy, finding a great pro is important!

- Early Intervention: Talk to your Early Intervention Coordinator and ask about whom would be the best fit for your child. Not happy? Call again and request a switch. It is that easy.
- Private Therapy: Referrals are often the best. This could be from a local support group that you have joined; a local special-needs organization or the specialist referring your child for therapy.
- Note: Always check insurance coverage, and make sure to get and follow-up on references.

Preemie Parent Words: When Preemie Therapy is "Stuck"

Deb Discenza gives insight into realizing when it is time for a change-up in the therapy regimen.

My daughter was 10 years old and the local therapy center near her elementary school had only a Monday at 8 a.m. slot for us, so we took it. At first she did well and we saw some progress. However within a few months, my daughter was half-asleep, grumpy, annoyed and downright ornery during those sessions. And the therapy homework wasn't getting done either because I was getting pushback from my daughter.

It was then that I realized we were "stuck" in therapy and needed a break. We pulled out and gave my daughter some breathing room. But I was deathly afraid of her regressing on the gains in balance and coordination and I was constantly trying to find ways to help make exercise fun.

Fast forward a year and I finally decided that it was time for something that combined therapy with fitness and hired a personal trainer at the local gym. The trainer had the background we needed. My request - keep it fun, keep it moving. He has done just that. My daughter loves her training sessions and is aware of how it is helping her in school and in life. Success!!

How have you gotten "unstuck" in #preemitherapy?
