Organization:
Sunnybrook Health Sciences Centre

Unit/Branch:
Neonatal Follow-Up Clinic, Women & Babies Program

Years Helping Premies:
Almost two years . . . and counting!

Focus:
Lesley is the first Board Certified Behavior Analyst (BCBA) to be included as a member of an interdisciplinary team within the neonatal follow-up network in Canada. Her clinical interests include: behavioral pediatrics, parent-mediated interventions, toilet training, sleep training, and non-compliance.

Professional Tip:

In a child's life, professionals will come and go but parents are always there. To make the most impact in any behavioral intervention, parent involvement is essential. Parents are the #1 change makers in their child's life!

Advocate: RSV Brief + Tips

The acronym RSV strikes fear into the hearts of preemie parents and professionals alike every cold/flu season. The Institute for Patient Access recently issued a policy brief on Protecting Premature Infants from Infectious Diseases. To read the brief go here: <http://preemie.us/RSVbrief> and PreemieWorld's tip sheet for keeping premies #RSVfree is here: <http://bit.ly/RSVFREE>

FREE: Premies Dads are Powerful

PreemieWorld provides a number of free handouts to be used in the NICU and beyond in its "Freebies For You" section of the website.

This month's freebie is another preemie symbol: Preemie Dads are Powerful. "Dads often feel neglected in the NICU environment, but our symbol says it all. The research is clear that fathers are a crucial part of their baby's life in the NICU and at home," notes PreemieWorld's Deb Discenza. "I hope NICU Nurses will print out this graphic and put it on incubators worldwide to remind Dads of their special powers."

Support:

Nathan C. Splant Foundation

Out of the Splant family's personal journey with premature birth, they formed the Nathan C. Splant Foundation to help other families.

Established: 2007

Outreach: NW Indiana and the surrounding Chicagoland area

Web: www.ncsplantfoundation.org

Focus: Providing parents with needed resources to help with the every day life changes that come with babies born too early and too small.

Programs: Grant giving, Racing for Babies event, Riding for Babies event and Prematurity Awareness Campaign.

Org: Baby Blues Connection

Baby Blues Connection was born when Nola Cross, survivor of postpartum depression, joined Wendy David, PhD to begin a mom-to-mom support group and telephone support for postpartum families.

Established: 1994

Web Site:

www.BabyBluesConnection.org

Mission:

To provide support, information and resources to women and families coping with pregnancy and postpartum mood disorders and to the professionals who serve them.

Programs:

Our 24-hour warm line is the first step. We offer mom-to-mom and dad-to-dad support groups made of women and men who have been through perinatal depression themselves. This unique model allows new members to identify with others in various stages of recovery and treatment. Beyond this we provide information about the latest research and treatment of perinatal mood disorders to members and professionals alike as well as a current referral list of specialists in our area. We are currently working to reach more families with NICU experiences with our After the Storm program, referring to the "storm" of emotions that comes when your birth plan failed, your birth is traumatic, your baby came early and it's all too much.

Book: Girl in Glass

The Details:

By:
Deanna Fei

Available at:
www.Amazon.com

Cost:
$26.00 USD

Premie parents can relate to the world upending itself when a baby is born premature. But imagine ending up in the media spotlight over a CEO's crass comments about to your "distressed baby's" medical bills being the reason for AOL's employee benefits restructuring. Fei tells her family's side of the story from traumatic birth to NICU stay to homecoming and a CEO's poor excuse for the challenged bottom line. Every premie parent as well as every special needs person challenged in the workplace will cheer aloud while reading this book.

After the NICU: Playing the "Premie Card"

There are scenarios outside of the NICU where using the "Premie Card" totally applies. Consider pulling it out in these situations:

- A well-meaning person at the doctor's office wants to get up close and personal with your infant . . . during RSV season.
- You see a friend at the grocery store as you are about to enter with your infant. The friend coos at your child and gets closer, cigarette in hand.
- The IEP team at school thinks your child is doing "great now" and wants to downgrade to a 504 plan thereby lessening services.

What's your #premiecard moment?

Tip: Holiday Gifts for the Differently-Abled Child

The gift-giving season is upon us and that can send many preemie parents running for shelter when trying to give out suggestions to well-meaning relatives. If your child has delays or is differently-abled, Deb Discenza has some suggestions for toys and more:

AblePlay from the National Lekotek Center (www.ableplay.org): This non-profit provides numerous services to help improve the lives of children with special needs through the utilization of toys and play. They offer play sessions, a toy lending library and more at numerous sites throughout the United States. And just in time for this holiday season, the organization has AblePlay, a site devoted to rating and reviewing toys across the developmental abilities of a child. This site is an all-around winner and a must-have for the holiday shopping season.

Toys 'R' Us Differently-Abled Toy Guide (<http://preemie.us/TRUdiffabled>): Though focused on Toys 'R' Us stock, the listing helps families navigate potential toy offerings suitable for their child.
